Continuous Learning

Continuous Learning augments education, training, and experience standards established for the DoD AT&L workforce. The DoD Policy on Continuous Learning, signed by the Under Secretary of Defense (AT&L) on September 13, 2002, provides guidance on obtaining, calculating, and documenting continuous learning credit for members of the workforce through a variety of activities. Features and Benefits

Self paced–Modules are available for users to access and complete at their own pace.

Relevant–All modules contain topics and information relevant to the DoD AT&L workforce.

24/7 Availability–Users may access modules at any time through the Internet.

Browse or Register–Users may browse through any of the modules on the Web site but must register in order to receive a certificate and documented continuous learning points.

Free–The modules are free to all users. In fact, DoD industry personnel are encouraged to take advantage of the continuous learning opportunities.

To register for a DAU Continuous Learning Module, visit the Continuous Learning Center at http://clc.dau.mil
