Nicole Daniel, Kevin Trissell, and Richard Hansen

Working-level integrated product teams (WIPTs) can help the Services develop joint capabilities most effectively, as demonstrated in a recent biometrics project.

33

Outside Influences on Systems Engineering: A Company Grade Officer's Observations in the Aftermath of a Difficult Project

Capt. J. Morgan Nicholson, USAFR

A problematic contract structure, incorrect requirements, and a lack of system expertise and test activities conspired to cause defects and increase costs for one project.

12

Product Support and Human Capital: Essential Ingredients for Optimizing System Readiness, Availability, and Life Cycle Costs

Bill Kobren

The Human Capital Integrated Product Team is using a variety of strategies to help acquisition professionals reduce life cycle costs.

16

Making Sense of the Changing Global Supply Landscape: New Rules and Reformulations

Carole LeBlanc, Ph.D. and Shannon Cunniff

The European Union's REACH chemical regulations are strict, but several resources and approaches can help avoid pitfalls.

22

Capability Disillusionment

Michael F. Cochrane, Ph.D.

The solution-agnostic capabilities-based approach to acquisition does not work, the author argues. Instead, a value-focused thinking model should be used to reform the process.

37

Eight Battle-Tested Survival Tactics for the New, Entry-Level DoD Program Manager

Brian E. Schultz

To prevent avoidable project failures, bring in systems engineering, done by real systems engineers, from the start.

42

Improving Services Acquisition Tradecraft: Services Acquisition Is Not for Amateurs

Peter Czech and John Mueller

Services acquisition poses unique acquisition challenges, but adoption of best practices can improve results.

47

Quality Assurance Tools for the Engaged Program Manager

Mark Gindele

A variety of tools can help program managers ensure quality and timeliness—but some are more valuable than others.

52

How Acquisition Training Has Changed Since We Were Certified

Wes Gleason and Steve Minnich

The passage of the Defense Acquisition Workforce Improvement Act (DAWIA) sparked an evolution of acquisition training. The authors share the feedback from a student survey, as well as their own reflections.
