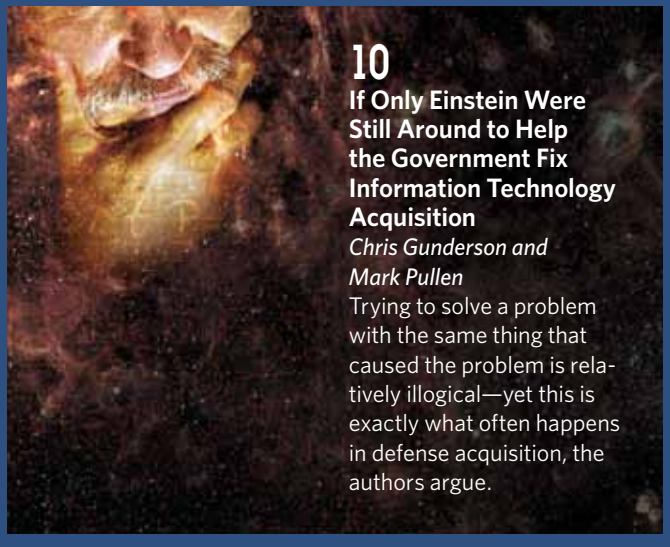
10 Things Great Program Managers Know About Product Support
Bill Kobren
To be a truly great program manager, you can't be rusty on product support. To earn your place in the Pantheon of Great Program Managers, take to heart 10 time-tested tenets that show how to reach beyond the merely adequate when it comes to product support.



10
If Only Einstein Were Still Around to Help the Government Fix Information Technology Acquisition
Chris Gunderson and Mark Pullen
Trying to solve a problem with the same thing that caused the problem is relatively illogical—yet this is exactly what often happens in defense acquisition, the authors argue.

14
Preliminary Industrial Assessment
Bruce Wilhelm, Steve Behrens, and Ian Cameron
Preliminary industrial assessment can help control operations and support costs. To that end, Naval Air Systems Command has developed a tool that could be applied across all Services, according to the authors.

20
Acquisition Program Management Challenges in Afghanistan Part 1
Darren W. Rhyne
Program management in Afghanistan requires special attention to requirements generation. Developing those requirements the right way means working closely with local and Coalition partners, making terms objective, and documenting everything.

25
Acquisition Reform as Performance Art
Ross Jackson
In the last 40 years, numerous, narrow attempts have been made to reform internal defense acquisition processes. But what have these accomplished? Until a much broader approach is undertaken, acquisition reform will remain the same old song and dance.

28
Increasing Participation of Wounded Warriors and Persons with Disabilities
Matthew Tropiano

Recruiting, hiring, and retaining more persons with disabilities—not just a good idea for the federal employer, it's also required by a 2010 presidential executive order. Tools like Schedule A and the Workforce Recruitment Program for College Students with Disabilities, and Operation Warfighter can help DoD achieve this human capital goal.

32
The EVM Hoax—A program leader's bedtime story
Patrick Barker and Roy Wood

There are many common objections to the implementation of earned value management (EVM), but EVM has real advantages. And successful programs are already using it—whether they realize it or not.

35
The Great Green Fleet: Enhancing U.S. Energy Security
John F. Morton and Scott C. Truver, Ph.D.

'Going green' isn't always windmills and solar panels. In the Navy, innovative technologies like hybrid-drive propulsion, solid-state lighting, smart voyage planning, and others are helping reduce energy consumption, and with it, total ownership costs.
